

*An obscure prophecy, a well-known woman – could this 2008
Presidential election be a horrible date with destiny?*

The 1933 prophesy went like this: "Remember, in that day, before the end time comes, that a woman... Now, you all keep this wrote down. There'll be a great powerful woman raise up, either be President, or dictator, or some great powerful woman in this United States. And [America-ed.] she'll sink under the influence of women. Now, you remember; that's THUS SAITH THE LORD."

Hillary held her audience spellbound; she had a large, packed indoor sports stadium swept up in her enthusiasm. It wasn't the health-care reforms; the magic was in her belief in the health care issue. She seemed crazed, angry, and passionate; she was a believer, she was anointed – she was a christ.

What snapped me back to reality was her actions, her ruthless behavior, and through extension, the audiences behavior towards a non-politico mother that questioned her "it takes a village" diatribe. This woman from the unwashed masses dared challenge the Hillary. She calmly, but clearly disagreed with Hillary in the open, public forum of Q & A after the speech. Hillary shut her down and turned all her angry zeal upon this mother that felt the family, not the community or the state was the better caretaker. Whew. It was not pretty, not presidential – it looked and felt dictatorial.

At that moment I could close my eyes and imagine Idi Amin, or Hitler or any other ruler that truly cannot stand being opposed. I know that's strong and harsh and maybe unwarranted, but it is how I felt at the moment and all that I read currently & objectively leads me to believe Hillary Rodham Clinton has the temperament and potential to fulfill this prophecy. ~ Is it later than you think?
